

Plan to Grow Radicchio, Too!

A live, online slide show and Q&A on how and why you should grow more of the coolest crop in the Pacific Northwest

Josh Volk of Slow Hand Farm will show slides and share growing notes from his recent trip to the center of the radicchio universe – northern Italy. He'll cover the basics of varieties, timing, planting, harvesting and sales techniques for standards like Chioggia and Treviso as well as specialty forcing varieties. Radicchio is an excellent fall and winter crop for extending your season and expanding your winter crop rotations and there has never been more demand or better varieties available than now. This workshop is specifically for market farmers who sell direct to the public, or to restaurants and specialty grocers – and, in the shadow of Covid-19 I realize that may be shifting rapidly for many of you.

Wednesday, May 13 – 7-8pm PST - online

Thanks to a generous donation from Eric Pond at Greenleaf Farm Management this workshop is FREE of charge but space is limited so please RSVP to josh@slowhandfarm.com to save your spot.
